Legumes like chickpeas, lentils and kidney beans are full of nutrients, inexpensive and good for you. So why not try some today? We’ve put together some hints and ideas to get you started.

The quick ‘n’ easy protein choice
You can buy canned, ready-to-eat legumes like kidney beans, chickpeas or lentils. They even come in single serve sizes, perfect for lunch at work or school.

Legumes are a great bang for your buck. Full of nutrients for a fraction of the cost of animal protein like meat and fish.

How much do I need?
Aiming to eat legumes 2-3 times a week is a great start. But, eating different legumes four or more times a week is best for reducing your risk of chronic disease.

One serve as a vegetable side dish = 75g or ½ cup cooked legumes
One serve in place of meat = 150g or 1 cup cooked beans, peas or lentils

Enjoy as a ‘meat’ or veggie
Legumes are recommended as part of the ‘vegetables’ food group because they contain a range of vitamins and minerals just like vegetables.

Legumes also contain protein, iron and zinc so the Dietary Guidelines recommend all Australians include legumes regularly in place of meat.

Not sure how to cook legumes? It’s easier than you might think.

THREE EASY STEPS:
1. Rinse in water and remove any dirt/stoned or legumes that may be shrunken. Good quality legumes produced in Australia are generally free of any stones etc.
2. Cover the legumes with plenty of water and soak them overnight (six to eight hours).
3. Change the water and gently boil the legumes until they are the texture you prefer.

Handy tips:
Save time by pre-soaking and cooking more than you need and freeze the extra. They’ll be ready to use next time.

If you don’t have time to soak legumes overnight, try the ‘quick soak’ method. Bring a large pot of water to the boil, add legumes, return to boil. Turn off, cover and stand for one hour.

WHY SOAK? Most legumes need to be soaked to make them easier to digest and absorb the nutrients. But split peas and lentils don’t need to be soaked, just boil them for about 20 minutes or add them directly to your casserole as it cooks.

Worried about gas after eating beans?

TRY THESE TIPS:
• Change the water once or twice while they soak.
• Drain the soaked legumes and use fresh water for cooking.
• Rinse canned legumes before cooking.
There are so many easy ways to add legumes to your day. They can be added to soups, salads and casseroles, mashed with vegetables, mixed with couscous or rice or even added to homemade cakes and muffins. Here are just a few ideas, but why not be creative and adapt some of your favourite recipes by adding legumes?
